Dear Sir;

Included is the information that I was able to find concerning the structure fire on the Beaverkill Campsite Road in the summer of 1957. The only newspaper in our collection that carried any mention of this event was the Livingston Manor Times. The article appeared in this weekly newspaper on the edition dated August 29th, 1957. Apparently, it was not considered front page material, the only mention of the event being made by a section columnist. I followed this paper for the next couple of editions and found no other information concerning the fire.

The newspaper was published on Thursdays, so according to the article, the fire was probably on Wednesday, August 28th. Weekly columns for these local newspapers sometimes were submitted, or published a week late, but I believe that is not the case here. The death of Orrin Sprague, which also appears in the column, occurred on the 22nd of August. This would not have been in the column if it was a week late.

I looked into other local newspapers, including the Liberty Register, Republican Watchman, Sullivan County Democrat and the Delaware Valley Evening News with no results.

The location of the fire was behind the residence of Mrs. Ethel Osborn. The current address of this property would be 80 Campsite Road. I've included the tax map for that section [map 7] in the Town of Rockland, Sullivan County which shows the old Osborn property, which is lot number 33. Lot number 32 shows the property with the address of 74 Campsite Road, the address that you made reference to. Included are the property ownership records showing the more recent land-owners for both properties. Also included is an image taken from the County real property website of the area. I've taken the liberty to highlight the Osborn property.

There was no information found concerning the origins of the fire. I spoke with one of the firemen who had participated in fighting the fire and was told the following story;

The fire was first called into the Beaverkill Valley Fire Company, located at Lew Beach. The initial response was by one pumper truck driven by Cecil Stewart, the first and only fireman to arrive on the scene. After laying out the fire hose, he discovered the truck to be nearly empty of water. He had to leave the scene to go down to the river to fill the truck. By the time he returned, the Beaverkill fire-chief had arrived but by then the building was fully engaged. The fire-chief then put out a call for assistance for the fire company from Livingston Manor. By the time that the Manor firemen arrived, the building was pretty much destroyed and efforts were made to make sure that the area surrounding the cabin did not catch on fire.
